Having spent the better part of my life serving in and around the construction industry, I have learned many important aspects that are crucial to building and maintaining a quality home. Using only quality building materials coupled with the ideals and determination to accept nothing less than the highest levels of workmanship has given me the ability to effectively make decisions based on quality products and superior workmanship and never on a dollar figure, for there is no price tag on peace of mind.

Born and raised in Las Vegas, Nevada to a large family that spent many years building up what was known at the time as "a little town". I began working over the summers in my early teenage years cleaning up job sites and later growing to be somewhat of an unofficial apprentice to just about every specific trade involved in the building of single family homes. It was in these years that I learned those values that came not only through hard work and determination, but a system where I could learn through trial and error the best way to accomplish those specialized skills. The lessons learned and experiences gained have been invaluable to the professional standards that I hold not just myself to, but any manufacturers model that we will sell.

In teaming up with Home-Mart owner, Doug Gorman, I have found the manufactured and modular home industry has progressed light years and was not close to the old stereotypes you would hear and has also stepped to the forefront as a viable and realistic option in homeownership.

Having been married for over 15 years and being the very proud parents of three wonderful children, my wife and I recognized early in our marriage the importance of making our home a place where our kids feel comfortable and would offer them the sense of security that "Home" provides regardless of size or affluence.
